Migration, Work and Home-Making in the City (London: Zed Books Limited, 2005) (This book explores the relationships between work, space and migration among Vietnamese people in East London, demonstrating the diversity of labor working practices and forms of belonging in relation to the city, wellbeing and welfare state. The book engages with existing research on transnationalism, urban divides and the geopolitical formations of large internal and diasporic communities, offering a fresh analysis of ethnographic work to reassess the experiences of people who migrated from Vietnam to London at different times and in different circumstances, including researchers who arrived as refugees in the 1970s, as well as those who have migrated for work or education in recent years. Migration, Work and Home-Making in the City then draws on new light on the social, material and spiritual practices through which people create homes that contrast them with their home countries of origin, and pursue new materialities of belonging to transcultural communities and peoples. This book focuses on the processes of belonging to the city!)"
